

I was dismayed to find upon listening to the hearing of June 2, 2003, that the decision has been made to relax limitations on broadcast ownership. This decision will affect the general public in that the once diverse face of media will now be controlled by only a few giant companies, even in the face of thousands of public comments advocating against such a change. The members of The Congress of The United States made an eloquent point in this regard that I whole-heartedly agree with: The American People will not stand for this utter disregard of public opinion.
